

Andreja Mesarič is a post-doctoral researcher focussing on Muslims in communist Yugoslavia as part of a multi-sited project on communist gender policies towards Muslim minorities in eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. This work builds on her previous research about pious women's experiences of Islamic revival in contemporary Bosnia-Herzegovina conducted as part of her PhD studies at the University of Ljubljana (completed in 2011). She previously held research positions at Middlesex University (2014-2015), and the University of Ljubljana (2006-2009, 2014) and received a fellowship from the Center for Advanced Studies in Sofia (2009-2010). Andreja has also conducted research through a range of London-based third sector organisations focussing primarily on gender, migration and mental health.
